Energy Conservation Leader Bluestone Energy Continues National Growth Strategy with the Opening of Philadelphia Office

Energy conservation and utility incentives drive company to open third office in less than one year

Philadelphia – September 30, 2010 – Norwell, Mass-based Bluestone Energy Services, LTD., a leader in energy conservation engineering and project development services for utilities and industrial and commercial clients, announced today the opening of a new office in Philadelphia - a key milestone in Bluestone’s national growth strategy.

The new office, which is the third office inaugurated by Bluestone Energy in less than one year, will be used to expand the work that Bluestone has been doing in the Greater Philadelphia area for over the last year. Additionally, new and existing customers will be able to take advantage of Bluestone’s service offerings and receive assistance in a number of areas, including demand-side energy management, navigation of complex utility incentives and reduction of overall energy consumption.

“We are excited to bring our energy conservation expertise to the Philadelphia market,” said Peter Fairbanks, President of Bluestone Energy. “In 2009, Bluestone secured over $4m in utility incentives for customers. We look forward to helping our Philadelphia customers save energy, reduce operating costs and traverse the utility incentive process.”

Bluestone’s Philadelphia office will offer the following turnkey solutions:

- Lighting Efficiency Improvements
- HVAC Design, Diagnostics and Upgrades
- Data Center Efficiency and Cooling Improvements
- Integration of Building Controls

One International Plaza
Suite 550
Philadelphia, PA 19113
(484) 493-7809

(more)

In addition to the Philadelphia office, Bluestone Energy has offices in Norwell, Massachusetts; Chicago, Illinois; Baltimore, Maryland and Williamsville, New York.
